The past week has been almost devoid of interest. The affairs given were of the quictest description, and as a whole, the week has afforded little interest to society followers. The cause of the inactivity is not wholly apparent, but may be laid to the house cleaning fever with which nearly every home is afflicted.

For the coming week the outlook is more promising. A number of informal affairs are already scheduled for the early days, while during the latter half of the week the Bostonians will drive dull care away.
